

CONTENTS

| | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| | Introduction | 10 |
| | In Search of “Participative Exotopy”: Karamzin and the West (“Letters of a Russian Traveler”) | 20 |
| 412 | Tyutchev and Atheism: a French Revolutionary Mark in his “Philosophy of the Stone” | 40 |
| | Rhetorization of Doubt | 40 |
| | The Issue of “Willfulness of the Stone” | 54 |
| | Sylvain Maréchal: Playing Sacrum or an Excursus on a “Man without God” | 74 |
| | Maréchal and Russia | 93 |
| | “French Lucretius”: Did Tyutchev know?.. | 107 |
| | Brief conclusions | 123 |

- 130 Writers of Polish Origin as Cultural Mediators
between Russia and France (late 19th – early 20th centuries):
the case of T  odor de Wyzewa 413
- 184 Merezhkovsky “comes to Paris”:
the Russian Writer’s Strategies of Conquering French
Literary Milieu of the “Belle   poque”
- 224 Boris Eichenbaum and Paul Claudel:
On Reception of Symbolist Mystery in Russia

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| | An Art Critic Francophone on the Collapse of History: Literature and Revolution through the Eyes of André Levinson | 250 |
| | Appendix | |
| | A. Levinson. | 282 |
| 414 | Contemporary Russian Literature: War – Revolution – Exile. Lecture at the Sorbonne on May 20, 1922 | |
| | Commentaries | 300 |
| | “We see him as a revolutionary ...”: Bunin estimated by French Communists and the writer’s literary reputation in the 1920s – 1930s | 316 |

| | |
|-----|--|
| 342 | On the Typology of Reception of Symbolism in Russia and in France (In Reference to the Debates in the Studio Franco-Russe of 1929–1931) |
| 384 | Conclusions |
| 388 | Index |
| 408 | Summary |
| 412 | Contents |