

CONTENTS

Chapter 1. The Right to Be Different: Literatures of the Peoples of Russia in the Modern Age

Poetics of Conjugacy: Mythologism and Folklorism in the Development of a National Literature	4
About the Limits of the Ethnical “Renaissance”: Cultural Otherness and the Possibility of Dialog	46
On the Brink of a Renewed Paradigm. On the Experience of Studying National Literatures: the Crisis of Standardization	78

Chapter II. Reception of the World of Another Nation, or How to Understand the Other

“Go Across the Terek”, or the Two Banks of a River of Life. L. Tolstoy’s “Caucasian Text” in the Ontologic Aspect	106
The Existential Choise. Rereading M. Lermontov	161

Chapter III. Memory as a Self Image: Narrative Identity

“A Remembering Man” in the Literature: Historical Memory as a Self-Identity Resource	178
“A Factor of Mental National Life”. Literature and Culture on the Pages of the Newspaper “Istanbul News” (1909–1910)	233

Chapter IV. Actual Classics

Meanings Not Lost. Literary Heritage: to the Question of Reevaluation	250
Universality of Special, or the Conjugating Thought of Alexei Kulakovsky	272
Identity after Aitmatov	285
Nostalgia for Stone, or a Will to Life	307
“There is a Powerful Pull of Height...”, or the Caucasian Theme in Arsenij Tarkosvky’s Life, Poems and Translation	320
In Search of the Lost Original: Nostalgic Myth in H. Musayasul’s Prose	332